

Denmead Infant School

SEND Information Report

What does Denmead Infant School offer pupils with Special Educational Needs and Disabilities (SEND)?

We are an inclusive mainstream setting that welcomes all children from different backgrounds with different needs. We listen carefully to our children and their parents/carers and work hard to make sure everyone's needs can be met. Our head teacher and deputy head teacher share the role of Inclusion Leader, leading an experienced staff committed to inclusion. Our head teacher is the named Special Educational Needs Co-Ordinator (SENCo) for the school. We are aspirational for all our children. Making sure every child is happy, successful and included is at the heart of everything we do.

How does Denmead Infant School know if children need extra help?

At Denmead Infant School we know our children very well. Understanding our children enables us to spark their interest and ensure they make good progress in their learning. It also helps us see if a child needs different or extra help to be successful. We have pupil progress meetings every 10 weeks to make sure all the children are learning and achieving. In these meetings we identify any children who have not made the progress we expect and plan how we can help.

We get to know our children before they start school. We meet with pre-schools, have parent/carers meetings and visits for the children. We also come to visit the children at their home, giving us a chance to talk to parents/carers as well. If your child joins the school later in the year, we speak to parents/carers and the child's previous school for information. If we know a child has SEND before starting at our school, we hold a transition meeting to make sure we fully understand their strengths and needs and we will try to visit them in their current setting.

What do I do if I think my child has SEND?

Talk to us! We try to make it as easy as possible for parents and carers to speak to a member of staff. The best time to catch teachers is at end of the school day, or you can make an appointment for a longer chat. We have formal parents' evenings in October/November and February/March and invite you into school regularly for events like 'Learning Together'. You can also choose to meet with our Inclusion Leaders to discuss any concerns – just phone or pop into the office to make an appointment.

How will the school know how my child with SEND is doing?

Teachers meet regularly with the SENCo for an SEND review meeting. Children with SEND are discussed, we look at their work and their needs are identified. Using all this information, we draw up a SEND support plan, with personalised outcomes for the year, along with small step targets. Children are regularly assessed to ensure progress is being made and that any special help they receive is working to help them reach their end of year outcomes.

The leaders of the school, including governors, need to make sure that children with SEND are make good progress. They look carefully at data to check this is happening. They also check that teaching is effective by looking at books and observing the learning in the classrooms. Any extra help given to the children should help them make good progress from their starting point. The leaders will check that any extra help given is effective and children are making sufficient progress towards the end of year outcomes.

How will I know how my child is doing and how will you help me support my child's learning?

At parents' evenings and in the end of year school report, teachers will tell all parents how their child is doing. If your child has SEND, you will also receive copies of your child's SEND support plan. There may also be other meetings with you during the year, such as annual review meetings or transition meetings. Some children have a home/school book to provide additional information and some parents pop into school daily for an update.

We will help you to support your child by providing home learning, such as reading books or learning letter sounds. We will provide information meetings to explain how we teach things like phonics in school. We will show you the kind of learning your child does in school during our 'Learning Together' sessions. We will also give you suggestions, during parent meetings, about things you can do at home to help.

How will the staff at Denmead Infant School support my child?

Your child's class teacher will support your child by planning work which interests your child, teaches your child new skills, gives your child the chance to practise and apply skills independently and is at the right level for your child. Teachers assess the children through observation and looking carefully at their work.

Teaching Assistants (TAs) work closely with the children and often work 1:1 with children who have additional needs. They follow the teacher's planning and talk to the teacher about the children regularly.

There is a Lunchtime Assistant for every class, who gets to know the children and looks after them every lunchtime. They are aware of any children with SEND and how this may affect them during lunchtimes. Sometimes they are given training to help, for example with behaviour or medical needs. Lunchtime Assistants feedback daily to teachers. They will ensure that your child is safe, happy and able to learn.

How will the curriculum at Denmead Infant School be matched to my child's needs?

At Denmead Infant School we ensure that all children are able to learn. We offer a 'mastery based' curriculum where we ensure all children have 'sufficiently learnt' a skill before they move on, to ensure there are no gaps in their knowledge. Teachers are continuously assessing the children to understand which skills they need to learn next. This may be taught as a whole class, a small group or individually.

How is the decision made about what type of and how much support my child will receive?

At SEND review meetings the SENCo will work with the class teacher to decide what kind of support a child will receive and how often. Different children will require different levels of support.

Sometimes, other professionals such as an Educational Psychologist or Speech and Language Therapist, will have made assessments and recommendations and the school will endeavour to accommodate this. If a child has an 'Education, Health and Care Plan', there are recommendations for the kind of support a child needs and how much, which the school needs to adhere to. We will constantly reassess how effective the support is and make sure there are on-going discussions with parents.

At Denmead Infant School we have a TA (teaching assistant) in every class to meet the needs of pupils with SEND. We make sure that all children have time with their teacher and independent time, so no child will have a TA with them all the time. The provision for each individual child on the SEN register is detailed in the child's support plan. We are always happy to discuss this with parents.

What support will there be for my child's overall wellbeing?

Every member of staff puts the well-being of the children first and does their utmost to ensure children are happy. Staff are given regular child protection and health and safety training, to ensure all children are kept safe.

Our Emotional Literacy Support Assistant (ELSA) is non-class based and full time, so is able to spend time with children who are emotionally vulnerable, including children with social difficulties.

Some children need medication whilst in school. Regular training is provided for staff to ensure that these needs are met.

All children are given responsibilities, such as taking the register to the office. In Year 2, all children have the opportunity to become a play leader and help the younger children at playtimes. School councillors, which include children with SEND, represent each class' viewpoints in school council meetings.

Who is in charge of SEND at Denmead Infant School?

Our Head teacher, Jane Clabon, is also our SENCo or Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator. She can be contacted via the school, by phone or email.

What training is provided for staff supporting children with SEND and disabilities?

Our leadership team plans staff training based on the needs of our children, delivering in house bespoke training , arranging for other professionals to deliver training or arranging for specific staff to attend external training. The school regularly accesses support from other professionals to help us support children with specific needs. We have an attached Educational Psychologist who offers training, advice and helps us assess children with complex needs. NHS colleagues help us to provide support for pupils who need speech and language therapy, physiotherapy and occupational therapy. Specialist nurses provide training and advice for pupils with severe conditions and illnesses such as diabetes or cancer. Pupils' emotional needs are supported through services such as CAMHS (Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services) and councillors at local hospices. Children with English as an additional language are supported through EMTAS (Ethnic Minority and Traveller Achievement Service). We also regularly use the Specialist Teacher Advisors, who offer vital information and resources for specific needs such as hearing impairment.

How accessible is Denmead Infant School?

The site is fully accessible for wheelchairs and children with physical needs. We have a disabled changing room and toilet, adaptations in children's toilets (such as bars and lever taps) and disabled parking. We work closely with Specialist Teacher Advisors and Occupational Therapists to ensure and required equipment, such as specialist seating and audio equipment are in place. We liaise with EMTAS (Ethnic Minority and Traveller Achievement Service) who assist us in supporting our families with English as an additional language.

All children are included in all parts of the school curriculum and we aim for all children to be included on school trips. We will provide the necessary support to ensure that this is successful. A risk assessment is carried out prior to any off site activity to ensure everyone's health and safety will not be compromised.

How are parents and carers currently involved at Denmead Infant School?

At Denmead Infant School we are committed to working in partnership with parents and carers to provide an excellent education for your children. We understand that you know your children best and we want to use that expertise to ensure all children can learn well. We want you to be fully involved in school life. We have a full induction programme for new children including parent meetings, visits to school and a home visit. We encourage parents to join their children in the classroom for 'Learning Together' and 'Sharing Learning' events throughout the year. We hold information evenings and regular parent meetings and send home a school report.

For children with SEND, the relationship between home and school is vital. We provide meetings with our SENCo at transition times or to discuss needs and provision at any other times during the year. Some children with SEND will need a home/school communication book or daily contact with the teacher or teaching assistant.

We understand that parents who have a child with SEND may find parenting challenging at times. We are always willing to listen and advise where we can or signpost you to additional home support.

Many parents contribute to school life by becoming a regular volunteer. We really value our volunteer helpers and provide training for them. We also have a very active and successful PTA (parent teacher association), who organise fun activities to raise money throughout the year. Other parents support the school by becoming a governor. If you would like to be involved in any way, or would like more information please speak to your child's class teacher, the school office or contact our head teacher.

How do we involve pupils at Denmead Infant School?

We listen very carefully to our children and strongly believe that by fully involving children in their education they will be more motivated, more independent and take more responsibility for their own learning leading to better progress. Our children have brilliant ideas and we fully involve them in school life and decisions through our school council.

Children with SEND are often given additional opportunities to have a say. We ask the pupils what helps them learn best and what will help them achieve their targets. Where appropriate we will include children in meetings, for example by recording their views to be presented.

What steps should I take if I have a concern about the school's SEND provision?

If you have any concerns about your child, please do not hesitate to speak to your child's class teacher who will be very happy to discuss things with you. Our approach is to listen carefully and work with you to resolve concerns quickly. You are also very welcome to speak to our head teacher or deputy head teacher, who you can contact via the school office. After listening to your concerns, we will agree actions and will keep you informed about developments, often through further meetings. Our staff will endeavour to address your concerns, however, if you wish to make a formal complaint you can write to the chair of governors (please see the school office or website for details of our formal complaints policy).

How will the school prepare and support my child to join the school and transfer to a new school?

We have a full induction programme for new pupils including parent meetings, visits to school and a home visit. Children with SEND may have an annual review meeting, TPA (Transition Partnership Agreement) or transition meeting to discuss strengths, needs and any support the child needs. Children joining the school are given a social story with photographs to introduce them to the setting and staff. We also encourage children with additional needs to visit the school on a number of occasions, perhaps after school when it is quieter.

A similar full programme has been developed with Denmead Junior School when the children are nearing the end of Year 2. There is good communication and joint working between SENCos.

If children with SEND transfer to a different school, the SENCo will endeavour to arrange a transition meeting and visits in preparation. We will always send information to the receiving school.
